Cassuto 1951 – האלה ענת (Hebrew translation of Ugaritic myths, public domain)

- Title: משה דוד קאסוטו, האלה ענת: שירי עלילה כנעניים מתקופת האבות (Jerusalem: Bialik Institute, 1951; 3rd ed. 1958).
- Source: Project Ben-Yehuda, https://benyehuda.org/read/31020 (marked "נחלת הכלל", public domain);
  plain text from `https://benyehuda.org/download/31020?format=txt` (redirects to an S3 link; retry if the connection resets – it did once on 2026-10-23).
- Retrieved: 2026-10-23 (Round 4 run 1). Licence: public domain (Ben-Yehuda) – committed.
- What is here: `cassuto-1951--ha-ela-anat.txt` (9,176 lines, as Ben-Yehuda gives it): the introduction (the discovery, the script, the language, the parallel traditions in Israel – "המסורות המקבילות בישראל"), then the texts in Hebrew-letter transcription with a facing vocalized Hebrew translation and a commentary.
- Texts covered: Virolleaud's V AB (= KTU 1.3) and VI AB (= KTU 1.1 ?), with the parallel passages of other tablets (e.g. KTU 1.5 I 1–3 in the introduction and notes). Not the whole Baal Cycle.
- Line numbering: Virolleaud's (columns A–F, his line numbers), which differ from KTU's: align by content (e.g.
  Cassuto V AB D 37–39 = KTU 1.3 III 40–42).
- His transcription convention (adopted, with small additions, for the Hebrew apparatus of `מיתוסים-אוגריתיים/`):
  the Ugaritic consonants in Hebrew letters, with a superscript bar for the extra phonemes (`תּ` = ṯ, `חּ` = ḫ, `דּ` = ḏ), and the three alephs vocalized (`אַ` a, `אִ` i, `אֻ` u).
- Usefulness: rank 5–6 (guidelines §3): 1950s readings, many superseded; a register check and a witness to the history of interpretation (he was the first to read the Baal texts against the Bible in Hebrew). Consult after drafting; never copy (it is public domain, but our rendering must be our own reading of KTU³).