[o 1] Let me be sated with your charms, Nanāya – your lips are very sw[eet...]

[o 2] [... your] passion is ... [...] | [...] lovemaking, Nanāya, ... let us make love,

[o 4] [...] May I always be lustrous. | [...] ... well-being, let him shepherd his men forever.

[o 6] [The...] ... (for?) Abī-Ešūh, may I perform again and again.

[o 7] [My lord], I will speak to her lover, so that she will gladly fill his heart with joy,

[o 8] [Muʾati], I will speak to her lover, so that she will gladly fill his heart with joy.

[o 9] [My lord], so sweet is your passion, the appeal of your love is sated with honey,

[o 10] Muʾati, so sweet is your passion, the appeal of your love is sated with honey.

[o 11] The image(s), the one(s) which you have looked (at), is/are constant festival(s). It/they will not be sat[ed...].

[o 12] Let me gaze at your body, so tall, filled with joy [...]

[o 13] Muʾati, (let me gaze at) your body, so tall, filled with joy [...]

[o 14] At you command may the king live forever! [At your command] may Abī-Ešūh live forever!

[o 15] The exuberant, our Muʾati, in daylight and darkness [...] | (traces only)

[r 1'] (traces only) | [...] prime, good [...] | She looked on Babylon with her kind eyes [...]

[r 4'] She blessed it, she decreed its well-being [...]

[r 5'] Daily lif[e for] the king who dwells in s[ecurity ...]

[r 6'] Nanāya, life for the king Abī-E[šūh (will provide)...]

[r 7'] She let him dwell in security [...]. | Passion, passion, (as) befits the face of ...

[r 9'] Nanāya of [illegible]

[r 10'] She treats kindly elated Muʾati; she seated him on a large dais [...]

[r 11'] Like dew charms (of love) rain down (on him).

[r 12'] [They make lov]e repeatedly. In her appearance he repeatedly rejoiced on her; whatever is hers is like water (for the) thirsty.

[r 13'] [Your ...] are beautiful. You are loveable...]. He is so sweet!

[r 14'] [...] this appeal of mine, rise, I want to make love (to you).

[r 15'] [...] let me be sated with your attractiveness.

[r 16'] [...] wherever, I will bring you whatever your [heart] desires from her. | [...] ... [...]
[r 18'] [...] let him be filled with love. | ... | ... | ... | [...] ... your(f.) love like a sleep [...]
[r 23'] [...] quickly [...] to veil [...]
