The folder's first Sanskrit and Avestan corpus (Round 5 run 1, 2026-10-30; world list Tier 1 #5). Texts of Indo-Iranian peoples who never met Israel: every parallel to the Bible is a shared motif (the apparatus says so in words), and the corpus is a far-away control for what is universal and what is particular in Gen 1–3, 6–9 and 22 – and, for the flood, a three-way control beside the finished Mesopotamian flood corpus (`../סיפורי-המבול-המסופוטמיים/`).
The second purpose (guidelines §1) is as strong: the oldest oral poetry of India (kept word for word, accents and all, for three thousand years), the Brāhmaṇas' ritual thinking, and Zoroastrian Iran.

Bases and tools

- `vedic_tools.py` (this folder): `convert` builds the line data from the raw sources; `data`, `tr`, `fill`, `mw`, `gra`, `ave`, `avelemma`, `lemma`, `lexmap`, `verify`, `build`, `grep`, `gates`, `selftest` (its docstring; `../tools.md`).
- Bases: VedaWeb (the Zurich text + morphology, CC BY 4.0) for the Rigveda; TITUS (Weber's ŚB, Aufrecht's AB; local only); GRETIL (MBh, the BORI text; the Kaṭha TEI, CC BY-NC-SA); CAB (Vd 2). Dictionaries: Monier-Williams and Grassmann (csl-orig, local), CAB's Avestan dictionary with Bartholomae's lemmas (online, per word).
  Rank 3: VedaWeb's translation layers (Griffith, Grassmann, Geldner, Elizarenkova), Jamison's online commentary, and the public-domain translations (Eggeling, Keith, Ganguli, Darmesteter, Hume) in `../sources/Archive-org--PD-translations/`.
- `renderings.md` (binding), `translator-brief--vedic.md` (for the translators), `parallels-index.md` (generated).
