Created 2026-10-21/23 by Round 3, run 6 (curated-translation-candidates.md, "Round 3 plan"). The corpus holds texts against witchcraft and the rites of the exorcist: how a Mesopotamian who believed himself bewitched named his fear, went to law with the witch before the gods, and burned her in effigy. The first text is the great anti-witchcraft ceremony Maqlû; later candidates (Šurpu, the CMAwRo rituals, the Lamaštu incantations, Hittite elimination rituals) would join it.

Why these texts (both purposes, guidelines §1)

- The Bible. Exod 22:17 מְכַשֵּׁפָה לֹא תְחַיֶּה names the Akkadian kaššāptu with its own cognate; Deut 18:10–11 lists the practitioners; 2 Kgs 9:22 and Nah 3:4 accuse Jezebel and Nineveh of kešāfîm; Isa 47:9–14 mocks Babylon's sorceries that the fire will consume; Ezek 13:17–23 attacks the women who "hunt souls"; Lev 14 and 16 purify with cedar, sprinkling and a substitute that carries sin away; Num 5 makes words dissolve in water. Maqlû is the fullest ancient script of the world those laws forbid.
- The ancient mind. Maqlû shows what a Babylonian feared (the neighbour's evil eye, a stolen hem or footprint, an image buried with a corpse), how he imagined justice (a night court before the gods, the witch as defendant, the sentence executed by fire), and how a body was cleansed and handed back to life at dawn.

How the parts relate

The eight incantation tablets are the words of one ceremony; the Ritual Tablet (RT) prescribes the acts that go with each incantation, quoting its first line. Every tablet ends with the first line of the next (a catch-line), and Tablet VIII recalls incipits of the earlier tablets. Reading order: I–VIII, then RT (or RT beside each incantation it quotes). Night (I–V: the witch's figurines are burned before Nuska and Girra, then the fire is quenched) gives way to morning (VI–VIII: fumigation, washing, the substitute, the sunrise prayers).
