Morris Jastrow Jr. & Albert T. Clay, An Old Babylonian Version of the Gilgamesh Epic (Yale 1920)

- Authors: Morris Jastrow Jr. (1861–1921), Albert Tobias Clay (1866–1925)
- Publisher: New Haven: Yale University Press, 1920 (Yale Oriental Series, Researches IV/3)
- URL: Project Gutenberg eBook #11000: https://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/11000 (files: …/cache/epub/11000/pg11000.txt and pg11000-images.html). Scans: archive.org/details/anoldbabylonianv00jastuoft, cu31924087973420.
- Retrieved: 2026-10-16
- License / copyright: Public domain (Project Gutenberg licence for the e-text).

Files

- `pg11000.txt`: Gutenberg plain text (UTF-8).
- `pg11000-images.html`: Gutenberg HTML.

Contents and relevance to Tablet XI

This book edits the Old Babylonian Pennsylvania and Yale tablets (= SB Tablets I–II, III–IV), not Tablet XI, so it contains no Tablet XI text. The introduction touches on the Flood story: the name Atra-hasis for the flood hero, the date of the deluge fragment, the "lesson" attached to the deluge story in the Assyrian version, and Sumerian vs. Akkadian deluge tales. It is useful only as background on the epic's growth.

Assessment

Of historical interest only for our purposes. (Gutenberg #18897, Langdon's 1917 Pennsylvania tablet, was also checked and likewise contains no Tablet XI. It was not saved.)