[o 1] Let me be sated with your charms, Nanāya – your lips are very sw[eet...]
[o 2] [... your] passion is ... [...]
[o 3] [...] lovemaking, Nanāya, ... let us make love,
[o 4] [...] May I always be lustrous.
[o 5] [...] ... well-being, let him shepherd his men forever.
[o 6] [The...] ... (for?) Abī-Ešūh, may I perform again and again.
[o 7] [My lord], I will speak to her lover, so that she will gladly fill his heart with joy,
[o 8] [Muʾati], I will speak to her lover, so that she will gladly fill his heart with joy.
[o 9] [My lord], so sweet is your passion, the appeal of your love is sated with honey,
[o 10] Muʾati, so sweet is your passion, the appeal of your love is sated with honey.
[o 11] The image(s), the one(s) which you have looked (at), is/are constant festival(s). It/they will not be sat[ed...].
[o 12] Let me gaze at your body, so tall, filled with joy [...]
[o 13] Muʾati, (let me gaze at) your body, so tall, filled with joy [...]
[o 14] At you command may the king live forever! [At your command] may Abī-Ešūh live forever!
[o 15] The exuberant, our Muʾati, in daylight and darkness [...]
