- Note: Judging from the photograph of the tablet in [RN493: 174=Pl. 1], there does not seem to be room for another sign to the left of RU at the beginning of the line. For the various suggestions made for this line, which all but one involve restoring such an extra sign, see [RN303: 129], as well as [RN493: 9; 13f.], who is the only one to read the line with RU only, namely as nadi "(he was) lying". For the latter see, however, [RN1364: 395], who points out that such logographic writings are quite uncommon in literary compositions. For the emendation to šarru "king" employed here, see l. c+8 ana šarri ea. In essence, it goes back to a suggestion by M. Gallery apud [RN162: 345 fn. 5].
