- N: enūma | ilū | amēlu
- T: When gods were man,
- L: enūma ← inūma I “when Bab.”; ilū ← ilu I “pl. ilū, ilānu god, deity a or the god, also du.”; amēlu ← awīlu I “man human being (also coll.)”
- Note: See the discussion of the line in OB I.

- N: ilū | nīra || ibnû | tupšikka
- T: The gods made the yoke, the carrying basket.
- L: ilū ← ilu I “pl. ilū, ilānu god, deity a or the god, also du.”; nīra ← nīru I “yoke, crossbeam”; ibnû ← banû IV “to create”; tupšikka ← tupšikku I “pl. f. brick-carrying frame”

- Note: See [RN118: 184]: “The second line of the opening couplet departs significantly from the OB version, which has ublū dulla izbilū šupšikka (I 2). It is easy to see how ub-lu and iz-bi-lu could be corrupted into i-lu and ib-nu-u₂ by a careless editor, but the substitution of dulla by ni-ra cannot be accounted for in the same way. As already translated, there are two ways of taking ni-ra: either it is nīra, i.e., the first object of ibnû (the sandwiching of a verb between two accusatives is also found in SB II 90), or it is nēr, the traditional number of the throng of junior gods. Our preference is marginally for the former, following SB I 41a, where the mutinous gods vow to break the yokes with which they carry their baskets of soil (tupšikku). However that may be, the remodelling of the couplet shows that, by this scribe at least, the first line was understood as a complete clause. The fact that the Assyrian recension nevertheless gives the incipit as enūma ilū kī amīlī, “when the gods like men” ([RN2709: 533–4]), shows that the scribes of the first millennium were almost as divided as modern scholars by the syntax and meaning of the OB inūma ilū awēlum (see above, fn. 1).”

- T: The great Anunna-gods, the seven,
- L: rabûtu ← rabû I “big”; anukkū! ← Anunnaku I; šebetta ← sebettu I “group of seven, heptad”

- Note: See [RN118: 184]: “The middle word, which replaces OB {*d*a-nun-na-ku}, must be a corruption of one-time Anukkū or Enukkū. At the end of the line, šebetta, for OB se-be₂-et-tam, evidently exhibits Aramaic influence (W.G.L.). On the force of the accusative see [lambert1980line: 84].”

- Note: See [RN118: 184]: “The first sign may be šu, but we cannot make good sense of šu-ti in the context. In the OB text the bottom horizontal wedge of the corresponding sign is too long for ku (as read by [soden1978erste: 54]), but could be šu# (coll.).” On the old photo, a reading ma looks very likely: the line would then contain a partitive apposition (σχῆμα καθ' ὅλον καὶ μέρος) [EJ].

If correctly read, the word apsâšu, replacing [ana a]psî, is coined by analogy with šamêšu, although we might have expected apsîša, as in Abi-ešuḫ’s Love Lyrics ([lambert1966divine: 54], 4: ap-si-ša). - Note: Concerning the lines 19-20 see [RN118: 185]: “The OB couplet probably reads *[ir-te-qu₂ (i-lu) šu]-u₂-u[t š]a-ma-i | [du-ul-lam u₂-ša]-a[z-bi]-lu {d*i-gi-gi} (for l. 20 see already [RN2009: 160]). In our l. 19 the sequence of signs e-x-x suggests Enukkū, the Anunnaki, but the traces are not secure. If we have read l. 20 correctly, the verb is no longer causative and the object Igigi has become the subject, šūt Ellil.”

Unless we account it a simple error, this must be explained as an archaism, for napaštum occurs in Old Akkadian, and once at Mari (ARM I 1, rev. 11', time of Yahdun-Līm). - Note: [RN118: 160] suggest reading the end of the line as it#-te-ne₂#-e[p-pu-šu-(u₂)-ni]. [RN7444: 423] and [soden1978erste: 88] as it#-te-ne₂#-e[b-bu-u₂!] (tebû Gtn). Note that the verb tebû is attested in similar contexts (see for example Enūma eliš IV 73: ilū tebûka, "the gods rise against you"). Although the end of the line in SipNB1 is heavily damaged, the reading adopted here seems possible.
- Note: The line is read by von Soden as [e-li-i]a-ma-a! it!-te-ne₂-e[b!-bu-u₂] ([soden1978erste: 88]).

Von Soden’s reading of the traces before *{d*a-nu-um} on MS L obv. 6' as [i-pu-u]l ([soden1978erste: 88]), must therefore be rejected. The only solution would appear to be that the trace he read as u]l is instead the end of a brief colophon (possibly [x mu.šid.b]i), as such marking a dividing point between Tablets I and II on MS L that agrees with the situation at Sippar, as represented by SB II (though not, apparently, by SB I).”
