- L: [k]īnat? ← kânu I “OAkk, Ass. kuānu(m) to be(come) permanent, firm, true”; manzaltašu? ← mazzaztu I, -šu I “M/NB manzaltu, pl. freq. manzalātu”
- Note: A logogram KI.GUB for tallaktu is not attested (see [RN680: no. 737], [RN2720: 1310-1311], [RN2721: T, 97-99]). The reading tallaktu of the previous editions appears to be based only on a vaguely similar line from Esarhaddon’s inscriptions cited in [RN432: 295]: šarru šaₓ tal-lak-ta-šuₓ a-bu-bu-um-ma ep-še-ta-šuₓ [la]b-bu na-ad-ru. A syllabic reading does not yield any recognisable Akkadian word, and therefore the sequence KI.GUB-ta-šu is here tentatively understood as manzaltašu, “his position”, perhaps in astral sense as the position of Jupiter (see [RN2721: M/1, 228-230]). Note that the homonym manzaltu, “drainage; flow of excrement” is attested with the logogram KI.GUB ([RN2721: M/1, 230]).

- Note: See [fromebllab0052: 123]: "The preserved NU rules out the restoration šum-r[u-ṣa-ku]. Moreover, it seems to confirm W. von Soden's suggestion to read here šumruṣāni, provided that we understand the sign NU to be vowel indifferent (= /ni/) – a phenomenon that is well-attested in Neo-Babylonian and Late Babylonian cuneiform sources."

- Note: Judging from the spacing in BabNB1a and SipNB1, the ša₂ after i-ra-ti is not a possessive suffix, but the determinative pronoun introducing a relative clause.
- Note: The lines in AššNA2 do not seems to conform to the other manuscripts. I tentatively place AššNA2 r 2'-3' here because AššNA2 r 1' most likely is either 94 or 96.

- Note: Already Langdon ([RN1538kk: 185 fn. 5]) notes that the verb at the end of the poetic line certainly is not uhtallil, and a collation of the tablet confirms this. The preserved traces suggest uhtellûša, derived from helû D "to make merry". Note that this verb was already suggested in [RN1617: 130 fn. 106b] ("Lies nach dem Kommentar uh-ta[l-l]i"). The sign lu₄ is not commonly used to spell verbal suffixes, but it is used elsewhere in this commentary tablet for the plural suffix -ū (see L II.2 SB "III" 69).

Considering the content of the couplet, a restoration inakk[amā] or inakk[imā] (from the verb nakāmu “to heap, pile (up)”; see [RN2721: N/1 156]) would also be possible, but this is ruled out by traces after the sign NAG.
